“What’s the Plan?” Podcast by ProSymmetry Launches to Bring Practical Insights for Strategic Project Delivery

Podcast To Cover Strategic Portfolio and Resource Management Topics with Related Experts

Cleveland – March 4, 2026 – ProSymmetry, a global leader in strategic portfolio delivery and resource capacity planning, is launching its “What’s the Plan?” podcast. The podcast will cover real-world solutions to project, portfolio and resource management topics. Each episode will feature conversations with subject matter experts tackling today’s biggest PMO and operations challenges, from aligning strategy with execution, the challenges and successes of business transformation to making the most of people, skills, and capacity.

Hosted by ProSymmetry Head of Product Marketing, Samantha Varner, each “What’s the Plan?” podcast episode will cover topics ranging from modern PMO challenges and their evolving roles in today’s organizations, resource capacity planning and forecasting, bridging the gap between strategy and execution, and lessons from real-world business transformations.

“‘What’s the Plan?’ will cut through corporate jargon and bring life into the PMO space, offering tangible insights about strategic portfolio delivery in a conversational style,” says podcast host Varner. “Many conversations I have are about starting a Project Management Office or advancing a company’s maturity with project management processes. Through this podcast, I hope we can continue to help our audience gain better insight into successful project and portfolio management.”

All episodes of “What’s the Plan?” will be hosted on YouTube, Apple, Spotify, and will be available at www.prosymmetry.com/whats-the-plan.
